General Education

As part of our dedication to holistic education, as described in our mission statement, Fukuoka University maintains a general education system that helps ensure that our students graduate with enlightened and broad-minded thinking capabilities, the ability to view problems comprehensively and thereby make sound judgments, and genuine humanity. The general education program is composed of courses from the three fields of the humanities, social sciences and natural sciences, as well as interdisciplinary courses, courses in foreign languages and physical education courses. The core characteristic of our general education program is that the curriculum is designed so that most students can complete the program within their first two years while still being able to take specialty courses at the same time.

Foreign language education at the university is one example of how this works. Languages offered in the program include English, German, French, Chinese, Spanish, Korean and Russian. The purpose of language education is to help our students develop broad crosscultural perspectives, and to equip them with communication skills that enable them to understand what others have to say while being able to express their thoughts and ideas.

General education occupies an important position in the university's comprehensive education system because it encourages our students to cultivate a spirit of initiative and eagerness to learn new things, supported by the ability to analyze and organize.
